Notable features:

The entire row has been formstoned except for number 213. These houses are of roughly the same date as those across Carey Street and north of them. All were built after the completion of St. Luke's Carey Street., i.e., 1865-1880. They appear on the 1876 map. This is an important group, apparently well maintained, although the formstone devalues their quality. They have marble steps, basements; numbers 201-207 have original iron work. The cornice line is somewhat damaged.

Environmental context:

Good scale for the wide street; pleasant little street trees, if a bit small. Formstone is unfortunate in that it brings this group into too great contrast and prominence in relation to the church, to the north. The empty lot across the street is also in need of design. For visual relation to both the church and to Waverly Terrace across Saratoga Street, the formstone should be removed.
